FIREFLIES

A revolutionary militia group formed in response to the oppression of the military-run Quarantine Zones (QZ), the Fireflies' goal was to establish democracy and order again. They were largely unsuccessful across the nation, having operations in a handful of former major US cities, but eventually set up base in Salt Lake City, Utah, where they banded in numbers while searching for a cure.

FIREFLIES

Firefly members can be identified by their Firefly pendants, stamped with their name and number. They also wear dark armbands with the Firefly logo printed in white. Since they started as a makeshift group, soldiers would use leftover military gear and material to outfit their army; vests, armor, and traded weapons reflect this, and they are usually in neutral greens and tans. The other iconic element of being a Firefly is the Firefly painted symbol on their left armband.

FEDRA

As an extension of the military, the Federal Disaster Response Agency (FEDRA) soldiers wear all-dark blue pants and shirts, with their black utility belt and black combat boots giving them an echo of former first responders prior to the outbreak.

FEDRA

More heavily armored soldiers will wear bullet proof vests with additional storage pouches for ammo, glow sticks, and a portable radio to communicate. Some soldiers go as far as to use riot gear and a helmet with a face shield.

CANNIBALS

When Ellie and Joel first encounter the cannibals, they are unaware of the danger they are in. The cannibals draw in victims by looking like everyday survivors. They live in a small community that survives on passersby who unexpectedly become their prey.

CANNIBALS

Cannibals are an unassuming group of survivors, wearing mostly normal street clothes. Given that the cannibals are encountered in the winter chapter of The Last of Us Part I, they canonically wear cold-weather apparel like heavy jackets, beanies, boots, and gloves. Cannibals usually have sunken features, such as dark circles around their eyes and sallow or gaunt faces.

HUNTERS

Hunters can be found throughout the United States, setting up base in cities abandoned by FEDRA. They target survivors traveling through the area by feigning injury, and then ambush and kill them to loot their belongings.

HUNTERS

Hunters are natural scavengers and wear whatever materials they find in their cities, whether that be leftover FEDRA gear or stolen apparel from their victims. Their clothing is usually ill-fitting and mismatched, and usually features heavy wear and patina. Additionally, hunters wear hats and upturned hoods so they can easily disguise themselves while waiting for their targets to spring their traps. Hunters usually have wounds, and even permanent bodily damage, as a fallout of their extreme tactics to trap their prey.
